“ I met Stan only in the past few weeks. I loved our conversations and considered him a new friend. He had such a story to tell. I only wish I could hear more and am so saddened by his unexpected death. Rest in peace -

“ I've come back to this site several times now, wanting to learn more about Stan through what his friends posted - and I'm surprised - and disappointed - that no one has taken the time to "send him off" with a few kind words. I didn't know him. Not really. I saw him as "that guy with the white ponytail, yellow bike and Sam Elliot-like voice". He was my customer (at the Citgo). He was always the gentleman, somewhat quiet, and while not jovial, he wasn't quite "grumpy" as his nickname would imply. I know that he loved his bike. And his Camels. I know that he deserves to be remembered. So, Stan/Grumpy, may your final ride be wild and free and lead you and your yellow bike to that "Stairway to Heaven", and know that I remembered you well. Peace.
